

BAGNO SIRENA

The bathing establishment was born around 1850 in that small bay that is located after the historic Palazzo D'Anna and takes the name of the tufaceous rock on which the same palace is built: Sirene Rock.

The family have been managing this establishment for a few years and in 1905 bought the backyard that gave access to the structure from Via Posillipo, which overlooks the area, and therefore its concession is from that year entitled to the same family.

Access to the State Grant and then to the beach crosses the property that is now divided between the various heirs that then form part of the society.

The structure is partially developed on the beach under concessionary and partially on planks of the "loggia" on a surface of approximately 1500 square meters in total.
